

PARTNERS: SAVE THE DATE

Show your support for state-defined forestry solutions at the National Association of State Foresters' 2018 Annual Meeting

WHEN: September 24-27, 2018

WHERE: The Lodge at Whitefish Lake, Montana

WHY: Join us in celebrating #HealthyTreesHealthyLives and the tremendous partnerships that ensure the long-term health of our nation's forests and trees.

From supplying forest products to filtering stormwater, state foresters know trees and forests do amazing things for American communities—rural and urban alike. At this year's annual meeting, NASF will be celebrating the many social, economic, and health benefits provided by trees and forests and the dedicated professionals who protect them from perennial threats like pests and wildfire.

NASF annual meetings are small and intimate, averaging around 200 attendees. Many who join us are senior-level decision-makers who can make a difference for your organization; others include industry and government leaders who drive the nation's forest management, urban forestry, and wildland fire management activities. The 2018 meeting's venue in northwest Montana is sure to provide a spectacular showcase of a range of issues important to state foresters and you—our valued partners.
